

How Do You React When Someone You Love Dies?

Sheila Munafo-Kanoza, Founder and Executive Director of Companions on a Journey

Because grief can be so painful and seem so overwhelming, it frightens us. Many people worry if they are grieving the “right” way and wonder if the feelings they have are normal. Grief is like a roller coaster - it has many ups and downs. It is ongoing, coming and going when you least expect it. Listed below are some grief reactions others have shared.

Physical Responses:

- Tightness in the throat and heaviness in the chest
- Crying at unexpected times
- Sensing their loved one's presence, like finding themselves expecting the person to walk in the door, hearing their voice or seeing their face
- An empty feeling in their stomach or a loss of appetite

Cognitive Responses

- Feeling restless and looking for activity, but may find it difficult to concentrate
- Wandering aimlessly, being forgetful or failing to finish things
- Having difficulty sleeping and dreaming of their loved one

Emotional Responses

- Feeling guilty at times and angry at others or at the loved one who has died
- Feeling as though the loss isn't real, that it didn't happen
- Feeling guilty or angry over things that happened or didn't happen in the relationship with the deceased
- Noticing mood changes over the slightest things
- Feeling the need to take care of other people who seem uncomfortable around them, by politely avoiding any discussion of their feelings of loss
- The need and desire to tell, re-tell and remember things about the loved one and the experience of their death

These are all normal grief responses. It is important to cry when prompted and to share your feelings with others. If you're concerned or worried about your personal reactions to grief, please seek counseling.

We're here for you.

8857 Cincinnati-Dayton Road Suite #002, West Chester, OH 45069
(513) 870-9108 | companionsonajourney.org